

SMALL STATES SUMMER SCHOOL IN ICELAND 2024

AUGUST 12-17

The Centre for Small State Studies at the University of Iceland offers a week-long intensive summer course, sponsored by the Nordplus Higher Education programme.

Small States and Current Security Challenges in the North Atlantic

The security environment in the North Atlantic has taken a dramatic shift in recent years, affecting the scope of small state policy and security matters in the region. This course will train young academics and future leaders in analyzing defense and security issues. It will provide valuable insights and knowledge on small state security policies and how small states can compensate for the limitations of their size and exert influence on world politics.

- The course brings together many of the leading scholars in the field of small state studies and security studies.
- The course is open to Master's students.
- Travel and accommodation is covered by the grant from the Nordplus Higher Education programme.
- The course counts as 4 ECTS credits.

Application process:

Each partner university nominates two students to participate in the program based on a competitive selection process. Students apply directly through their own universities, by sending a CV, Transcript, and Letter of Motivation to their university's contact person.
